IPTV from Netvue at Sony Pictures

In 2019 Sony Pictures moved to a new London corporate headquarters in the prestigious new Brunel building by the canal at Paddington. Netvue was asked to supply, install and commission a new IPTV system to support TV display screens throughout the building.

Netvue's IPTV streaming system distributes over 80 IPTV channels of TV and radio across the company's IT network to multiple users in reception and hospitality areas, as well as meeting rooms and offices.

Sony Pictures originally bought a Netvue IPTV system in 2007 to distribute live broadcast TV and off-air feeds of their own broadcast TV channels throughout their UK corporate headquarters in central London.

Netvue continues to provide the Sony Pictures facilities and technical operations staff with second-line support for their entire IPTV system, from satellite dishes on the roof, through encoding equipment and the server in the IPTV head-end, to IPTV receivers and desktop viewing.

Benefits of IPTV

IPTV is the convergence of television distribution with IT data network infrastructure. IPTV has rapidly become the industry standard for TV and audio-visual distribution around buildings.
